Managing a Weekly Newsroom Staff
By Don Heinzman
A handy guide to every aspect of managing a small newsroom, from training employees to managing news space. $10

Editors of small newspapers often have to make tough decisions. Do we print the photo of the car accident? Do we report on that suicide? Do we say the high school football star was suspended for smoking? Bad News and Good Judgment helps editors make those decisions wisely and with sensitivity. The book also helps newspapers set their ethics policies, and shows how they can be effectively communicated. The book concludes with a set of sample ethics policies newspapers can adapt to their own needs.

Author Jim Pumarlo was the editor of the Red Wing Republican Eagle in Minnesota for 20 years, and many of the examples in the book are from his own personal experience. ~~$18.95~~
