George Wadley used to improve the description of a Medal of Honor recipient as a "distinguished man." Now he's getting used to the concept of a 20-year-old recruit from Utah. Wadley's service in the Navy during World War II earned him the highest honor on the island during some of the fiercest fighting of the Pacific campaign. He had a jumping ship order. He was awarded the Medal of Honor for his actions during the Battle of Iwo Jima.
